500 Wounded In Chile Riots

TIPTON FARMERS—I see they are on the war path against the Tipton merchants who are against them in the T. B. cattle testing racket—they have a right to be—merchants will awaken some of these days, when the farmers get more thoroughly organized—and will realize that the farmer is NOT TO BE PLAYED WITH—I feel the time is coming when the Tipton and Muscatine County also Louisa and Scott County folks are going to be the ring leaders in a ONE FARM ORGANIZATION—when that day comes—these merchants who today stand without MORAL COURAGE—will begin to think—in Tipton, the farmers bring their own lunch when they come to town to gossip—they are using the city for a gossiping place instead of a merchandising center—that will hurt Tipton businessmen and I suggest they THINK TWICE and get together with the farmer and not feel that the farmer does not have a right to fight for what he thinks is right—they have their business and trouble to fight as the businessmen have theirs—Muscatine is going to feel that same thing some day—we have merchants that fight this paper—this paper is the only one the farmers and laborers have to fight their battles with—a strike—now another strike is in the face of farmers and laborers—they will resent it—you watch and see—in the past 30 days—at least ten farmers have called on me asking about the advisability of opening a co-operative store in Muscatine and Tipton, where they can trade and inter-trade with themselves—it has been done before and may be done again—someone is trading on dangerous ground—they may not be able to see it before it is too late, just the same as their moral courage was not strong enough to permit them to work for K-TNT when the big crowds and hundreds of thousands of dollars were coming to Muscatine—Muscatine has seen THREE BUSINESS HOUSES CLOSE THEIR DOORS IN THE PAST FIVE MONTHS—two selling wearing apparel—and one shoe store have gone—A cafe has been advertised for sale—a hotel can be secured cheap—only a few months have passed—wait another year and this list will grow—an upholstering company has gone also—this does not look good for real estate increased valuations—I have several pieces I will sell cheap—possibly the Muscatine Journal will be able to keep the town prosperous and bring back what the town loses—the merchants will be the best judge of that.

MUSCATINE MERCHANTS—after you read the above paragraph—then think of this—the average purchasing power of folks in Muscatine city is ONLY ABOUT FIVE MILLION DOLLARS—the purchasing power of folks outside of our city, and living in our trade area—is NEARLY TWENTY-FIVE MILLION—which do you want to cater to?—This paper has far the largest circulation of any paper in that trade area—over 8200 circulation, while the NEXT LARGEST in their ABC audit says they have only 7842—you merchants who are complaining of bad business—who have been giving all your copy to our contemporary—or who sleep in their bed and pacify us with small copy—give THIS SOME THOUGHT—don't let personal friendship or prejudice stand in your doorway to keep the dollar OUT.

LEAKS—there are leaks in everything—even doctors offices—the attendant was sitting in room adjoining room—patient was examined—doctor said—"Sorry, but you must have an immediate operation for appendicitis"—"but Doc what will it cost?"—"$500," said Doc—"I haven't any money"—"Oh, let's see, how long have you had the pain?"—"About two weeks"—"Well you take these cathartic pills for your constipation," HE GOT WELL.

DOUBLE GUARDS TIGHTENED

All Inmates Locked in Their Cells to Halt Disorders

JOLIET, Ill. (INS)—A gasoline bomb first evidence of a threatened riot at Stateville penitentiary, was hurled at the feet of guards today as they were searching a cellhouse in the prison.

The bomb did not explode.

The guards had just begun their search of the cells for weapons when an unknown convict in a cell in the top of cellhouses tossed the bomb.

JOLIET, Ill. (INS)—All the 2,800 men in the new Stateville "model" prison were locked in their cells today, with absolutely no communication to the outside, either by mail or by visitors.

This drastic measure was ordered by Warden Henry C. Hill after the second riot scare of a week, in which it was rumored that ammunition and firearms had been smuggled in and that the convicts were plotting to destroy the four-story completed new cellhouse.

Eight sledge hammers and 100 feet of hose were found missing when a checkup was made after the convicts were locked in their cells Thursday following the day's work.

Statesville will be "incommunicado" it was indicated, until a thorough search is made of the 64 acres within the prison walls, a procedure that may take a week or ten days. During this period, the felons will be kept in their cells 24 hours a day, being fed there instead of in the prison dining hall.

Capt. Hall Carr, assistant chief of the state highway police and a detail of 45 men reinforced the regular guard force to keep the convicts in place and prevent an outbreak like the devastating ones several months ago.

First hints of a recurrence of the ill-feeling among the inmates came Tuesday when it was rumored that the walls were to be bombed. The state highway police rushed to the scene but nothing happened. Again Thursday word came to the officials that a break was planned for about 4 o'clock just when the 700 convicts working in the prison yard are returned to their cells.

Coast Guard Blamed In Death Of An Innocent Ship Passenger

DETROIT (INS)—Developments in the now notorious Detroit "rum running" shooting in which an innocent passenger of an excursion steamer was wounded by a bullet which wounded Arthur Caldwell, the excursionist aboard the St. Clair, showed the customs guard had fired the shot. Examination of the lake ship showed four other bullets imbedded in the starboard side of the craft.

Representative Robert Clark of Michigan, demanded in a formal statement that federal authorities remove or transfer assistant collector of customs Walter Pettit, who is in charge of the dry navy in the Detroit river, the international border between Canada and the United States.

More than 30 shots and had at first maintained they had only returned the fire of the rum-runners.

Reports of ballistic experts that the bullet which wounded Arthur Caldwell, the excursionist aboard the St. Clair, showed the customs guard had fired the shot. Examination of the lake ship showed four other bullets imbedded in the starboard side of the craft.

Several passengers of the steamer St. Clair came forward with sworn statements that the rum-runners which the customs guards were chasing had not fired a single shot from their boat but had raced around the steamer using it as a shield. The customs officers fired

DAMAGE AT ICE COMPANY BLAZE SET AT $5,000

2 Trucks, 15 Wagons Ruined in Early Morning Fire

A fire of spectacular proportions that started in a mysterious manner at 2:45 this morning in the Puritan Ice company's former ice house on Green street, which of late has been used as a garage and storage building, completely destroyed the structure, together with two large trucks and 15 ice and coal wagons. The loss was estimated today by W. E. Volaw, manager of the company, to reach approximately $5,000, which was partially covered by insurance.

Members of a dance orchestra returning to Muscatine from an out of town engagement, were the first to observe flames shooting out of the building and notified the fire department. Trucks from the central station and the No. 3 station, two blocks away, answered the alarm.

The fire had gained considerable headway and was completely enveloped in flames when the trucks reached the scene. Just as the firemen arrived, the roof of the structure caved in. The fire burned so fiercely that the firemen were unable to get close enough to the building to attempt the removal of the trucks or the wagons.

Our Enemies: J. C. Broud Co., Hardware

No matter how good a fellow you are, or want to be—you simply must be careful what you do and say if you do not want to make enemies. The reason the world is being overflooded on fallacies is because, if anyone tells the truth, there are those who will hate you for it, for the reason that they fear losing a dollar. Then there are those who would continue selling merchandise in order to grasp the almighty dollar, even though they knew the thing they sold would harm their best friend. Then there are others who sell certain kinds of merchandise and are sincere about it, and if you try to EDUCATE THEM TO THE FACTS as to why they should not do so, they become your enemies for life.

It all reminds me of a doctor near Philadelphia, whom I visited a few months ago. He was sitting in his office one day and he was asking me to start a branch of the Baker Hospital in Pennsylvania. During the conversation we drifted to radium.

He said, "I was talking to a doctor in Philadelphia that said his best friend, an M. D., would gladly come in on a cancer cure treatment place, but that he had such a heavy investment in radium that he could not afford to get behind any other cancer treatment or cure until he had made his money back on the radium he had."

In other words, willing to kill his friends with Radium, which is the ultimate result, rather than lose a dollar.

Regarding Mr. Broud, some years ago, he and I were figuring with the Muscatine Bank for the purchase of the old McQueen building on West Second street. I refused to give the amount they asked and Mr. Broud purchased the same through the bank, which he does not like me, however, I do not believe there was any feeling on the part of Broud over the building. Later I started a K-TNT store on West Second street and from the window dressing of Brouds, it appeared to many that he felt the competition.

In the meantime Broud had taken over or stocked quite an amount of aluminum ware. A fellow by the name of Bond, was the salesman in this territory for the aluminum companies. Naturally, Broud had to turn over that aluminum ware to make a profit. Whether he turned it all over or not, I don't know, but I know that Broud had a lot of aluminum ware in his store.

My attack was on the commodity, not anyone who sold it. Many merchants, learning the truth, refused to sell it and stocked their store with other kinds of cooking wares. So did Broud.

While I killed the aluminum business of Broud, I killed the business of many other merchants who were selling aluminum ware and then they could decide for themselves.

BOILER TRIAL IN THIRD DAY

Defense Gains Many Points at Hearing Today

BURLINGTON, Ia. (INS)—Evidence which failed to develop any of the startling disclosures and "inside facts" but which earned several points for the defense, featured the boiler trial moved into its third day.

Mayor E. C. Marquardt, Naumann and C. W. Bond, secretary-manager of the chamber of commerce, were among the witnesses called by the state today.

Unless more evidence of the alleged negligence and carelessness of the county supervisor is developed by the state, there is every indication that the defense will win dismissal of the action on motion following the resting of the state which will probably be Saturday afternoon or Monday, court house attaches said Friday.

REVOLUTIONISTS FIGHT SANTIAGO POLICE FORCES

Demonstrations Are Directed Against President

BUENOS AIRES (INS)—The situation in Santiago, Chile where 500 casualties already have resulted from clashes between revolutionary elements and police, is growing more serious hourly, International News Service learned this afternoon from a telephone from the Chilean capital.

The population is in a state of effervescence, and new disturbances of a serious nature are expected.

President Ibanez, against whom the demonstrations are directed, was reported as announcing this morning he would die before yielding to the efforts to remove him from office.

By PERCY FORSTER

BUENOS AIRES (INS)—Five hundred persons were wounded in revolutionary rioting in Santiago, capital of Chile, Thursday night and early today, according to a telephone message to International News Service.

Most of the injured were civilians who were clubbed by police as they surged through the streets of Santiago shouting "Down with President Ibanez!" At the time International News Service talked with Santiago, the situation was somewhat quieter, but serious fighting was expected momentarily as combatants prepared to attack 2,000 who had transformed a university building into a fort.

A new cabinet, headed by Senator Carlos Freuden, friend of President Ibanez, was attempting to maintain order today. It took the place of the cabinet of Senator Francisco Gana, which resigned Thursday after serving only a day.

Heavily armed troops occupied the center of Santiago today and it appeared that the army was loyal to the President. If it continued so, it seemed likely today that Ibanez would emerge from the struggle as victor.

However, in well-informed quarters of Buenos Aires doubt was expressed that the president could maintain his position. Former president Alessandri and his sons and nephews who were exiled several times by Ibanez are at present in this city waiting for an opportunity to return to Chile.

Outbursts against the Ibanez regime were watered down on Sunday by the arrival of Chilean students at Valparaiso clashed with police during rioting in that city Thursday night.

CHICAGO ALCOHOL COOKER IS SLAIN

The hand of "Scarface Al" Capone was seen today with another mysterious slaying in the war between the Capone gang and rival syndicates.

John Balkovatz, 22, an alcohol cooker, was shot down as he opened the door of his home. His body was found, his feet doubled beneath him. His .32 calibre revolver was unfired, showing that he did not have a chance to resist.

Police attributed Balkovatz's murder to the rum war which has claimed about ten victims this month. Attempts have been made by other racketeers to "muscle in" on the Capone territory and police attributed the mysterious slayings to this force.

from the burning building to the adjoining neighborhood and a close watch was maintained by occupants of nearby homes who were aroused from their sleep by the illumination which entered their houses. The fire was visible in nearly all parts of the city and many were attracted to the scene of the blaze, despite the early hours.

Tramps Are Blamed

Belief was expressed today that the fire was accidentally started by tramps who had entered the place to sleep. It is thought probable that they had smoked cigarettes and had dropped the burning sticks in the sawdust which still remained in the building from the time it was formerly used as an ice house.

The building was constructed in 1919 as an ice house but was not used for this purpose for the past ten years, as the company has been engaged since that time in the manufacture of artificial ice.

Mr. Votaw stated today that plans were already under way for the construction of a garage to replace the one burned Thursday night.

The company was considerably handicapped today by the loss of the two trucks and the ice and coal wagons but was delivering orders as usual with trucks hired from other concerns. The trucks, which were badly damaged by the flames, are not damaged beyond repair.

TWO ENJOINED IN REALTY SUIT

Keturah Hopkins and Justice Horst Are Named in Writ

A writ of injunction restraining Keturah Hopkins and Justice of the Peace H. D. Horst from further prosecution in the latter's court of a real estate action or removal of the plaintiffs from possession of lots 11 and 12, block 45, Park Place addition, was issued by Judge D. V. Jackson in district court following the filing of a suit by Thomas Hungeate and others today.

In another suit filed in court today, a petition asking that a writ of error be issued to Justice of the Peace H. D. Horst, commanding him to certify to the clerk of the court his records of proceedings in the suit of Sarah Hopkins against Thomas and Inona Hungeate. The action involves a real estate transaction in which the title to certain property is questioned by the defendants. C. J. Rosenberger is attorney for the defendants.

In the suit of Thomas Hungeate, it is alleged the plaintiffs entered into a contract for the purchase of lots 11 and 12, block 45, Park Place addition, for $1,100. The plaintiffs claim to have paid $50 down, but claim that the defendants refused to accept the balance due.

An affidavit by Inona Hungeate, which accompanies the petition, states that on June 15, 1931, the plaintiff in the suit filed a petition in justice court alleging she sold the defendants certain real estate, that they had defaulted, and that she had served a 30-day notice for them to quit the premises, and ask that a writ of order be served against the defendants. She also adds that she put into possession of the real estate, the petition states, on July 19, 1931, according to the affidavit, the defendants advised the plaintiff that they were willing to pay the balance of the contract of sale, but in examination of the title to the property, found that it was not saleable and not as good as required by the contract. The defendants state in their petition that their request to have the case transferred to district court, was overruled in the justice court and this action constituted a writ of error.

Winners in Gift Campaign May be Known in Big Vote Contest

Up to Monday night until 10 o'clock is all that remains of the high vote period of the Free Press gift distribution. That makes Monday the outstanding day of the entire campaign.

Candidates should realize that what is to be done must be done now if high vote credits are to be received. When the clock strikes the hour of 10 Monday night the high vote period will be history. After Monday night the next and lower vote schedule will be the governing factor.

In order to accommodate every candidate, the campaign department will be open Monday night until the final hour—10 o'clock. Subscriptions mailed from the postoffice anywhere by 10 p. m. Monday will be credited on the high vote schedule, though they may not reach campaign headquarters until later.

Candidates can work up to the very last minute Monday to get subscriptions that will carry the high vote value. A subscription taken and turned in before 10 p. m. Monday will count more votes than one turned in later in the campaign. Those who have promised to subscribe through candidates should know this.

There is no doubt that readers of the Midwest Free Press are greatly interested in the campaign. Many of them are actively supporting various candidates and they are watching with keen interest the progress of their favorite candidate from week to week. It takes the subscriptions to win. They make the big bulge in the vote score and the bulges they should make Monday should be greater than any time before.

The candidates are going into the final days of the high vote period nip-and-tuck. It is anybody's race. The leaders have many rivals. With up to two of the big prizes possible for award in either of the districts and with big cash prizes or a liberal commission guaranteed to every active candidate there should be rivalry. There never has been such an opportunity presented to the men and women of this vicinity. Those who best avail themselves of the last high vote days will profit greatly. The winning votes can be made by Monday.

All on Even Basis
No one has anything "cinched."
No one has anything won. One candidate's opportunity is as good as another's today.

If you think you are beaten, you are.

If you think you dare not, you don't.

If you would like to win, but think you can't.

It's almost a cinch you won't.

If you think you'll lose, you're lost.

For out in the world you'll find Success begins with a fellow's will.

It's all in the state of mind.

Full many a race is lost, Ere ever a step is run, And many a coward fails, Ere even his work is begun.

Think big and your needs will grow. Think small and you'll fall behind.

Think that you can, and you will. It's all in the state of mind.

If you think you're outclassed, you are.

You've got to think high to rise. You've got to be sure of yourself before you can ever win a prize.

Life's battles don't always go To the stronger or faster man. For sooner or later the man who wins Is the fellow who thinks he can.

The fact is, the votes earned by Monday night should largely determine who the ultimate winners will be. It is not what has been done in the past that counts so much now, but what we can accomplish by Monday night that will be the great factor in determining success or failure.

Some candidates who up to now have not made any spectacular showing in the race may emerge at the close of the period with a very substantial vote lead over the whole field. There must be candidates who well realize the tremendous vote advantages this period holds out for the remainder of the campaign. Next week will be too late, for then a lesser vote schedule will be in effect. The high vote offer, which expires at 10 o'clock Monday night, will never be repeated.

Campaign headquarters will be open until 8:30 o'clock each night this week as usual to receive subscriptions and issue supplies.

Raw ammonia will remove paint spots from a door. Be careful not to allow the ammonia to remain on too long, as it will eat the wood.

LOCAL PLATES ON DEATH CAR

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia.—(INS)—Sheriff Percy Lanson stated this morning that Patrolman Charles Esbeck acted clearly within his rights when he shot and killed an unidentified man in the railroad yards here early this morning.

Esbeck and Clarence Lane of Council Bluffs stopped a coupe to question the occupants. When Esbeck found a large knife on the person of Harry Harrell, itinerant laborer, he decided the situation merited further investigation.

As Esbeck led Harrell away from the car the unidentified companion of Harrell jumped from his car and raised a revolver to shoot Esbeck. Lane cried a warning to the police officer who wheeled around and shot once, the bullet passing through the unidentified man's head.

Harrell told police he had met his companion a few hours before and that the pair were driving to the Dakota wheat fields. No identification could be made from the man's belongings.

The car carried a Muscatine county license, "70-4602."

NUMBER STOLEN HERE

An investigation by the sheriff's office here today revealed the fact that license numbers on the car held in Council Bluffs corresponded here last week from a Nash automobile belonging to Elmer O. Lindow, 1210 New Hampshire street. The plates were taken from the local man's car as it was parked in the business district.

THE BLACK BOX

By ISABEL F. WILSON

Elizabeth Tarleton, seated on a low stool before the fireplace, lifted a piece of coal with the brass tongs and laid it among the ruddy embers in the grate, where it sparks shot upward, the coal divided and a green flame rose from the crevice, widening to a blaze that lit up the delicate face and sent weird shadows leaping up the wall.

Drawing closer the gray scarf that wrapped her spare shoulders like a mist, she leaned forward, spreading her wasted, jeweled fingers to the warmth. The great, drunken eyes were fixed on the dancing flame as if it in the saw that which troubled her.

Suddenly a look of decision brought her lips firmly together. She swept across the room to the high desk in the far corner, returned with a portfolio, and began, by the light of the hearth, to write a letter. When it was finished she added a postscript:

"It will be a final visit, John. Perhaps not for long. At the last, I want to be with you."

Thus, a week later, old John Tarleton, in an unaccustomed Sunday suit, met the invalid at the little station in Woodstock, and took her to his home.

Every Sunday for a month his two sons, with their wives and families paid their aunt a duty call—Philip, the millhand, and Luke, who worked the adjoining farm. They had been kind to me, John. I have been kind to me.

On the afternoon of the fourth Sunday Elizabeth called her brother alone into her room. Laying her hand on his she said gently: "You have been kind to me, John. I have been kind to me."

John's faded eyes misted. "I love having you, dear," he told her. "Finger resting on the key," she ordered, playfully. "You mustn't open this till after I'm gone, John," and handed him the box.

Her brother reassured her with a heartiness he was far from feeling. "Now, Elizabeth, you're just tucked out. A good night's sleep and you won't know yourself."

Kissing her, he went out, the box tucked under his arm. Luke met him in the hall. "What's that, father?" he asked, pointing to the box.

"Your aunt gave it to me. It's not to be opened yet." The words came with difficulty. "I changed my mind about burying so great a treasure, and, as you have guessed, stole the black box myself."

John Tarleton brought forth the black which truth to tell, he had entirely forgotten.

His two sons and their wives gathered around the table as it was opened.

Amazement sat upon their faces. Neither old John himself nor his sons had deemed Elizabeth Tarleton a wealthy woman. Yet here were pearls and diamonds set in rings and brooches, unmounted, stones, a sapphire that seemed a live thing under the light—jewels worth a fortune!

"Elizabeth had a lover once—I never knew he was rich," mused the old man. "He must have given her these." After several minutes pondering he declared: "We'll divide these afterward. I haven't any use for them. Poor Elizabeth!"

Philip's wife, her eyes unusually bright, suggested an immediate division. "There's no use in waiting, father dear. I'll take that sapphire right now."

Save for the quiver of her nostrils Lily, wife of Luke, seemed scarcely to breathe. "I'd like that for myself," she said sharply.

Philip took sides with his wife while Luke stood regarding them, scornfully silent.

The bereaved old man's sense of decency was so outraged that he gathered the jewels in a heap, tossed them back into the box, snapped the lid shut and locked it. "We shall have no more of this,"

he cried in deep anger. "The box will be buried with Elizabeth." He stepped into the darkened room with the single candle burning and laid the black box in the casket, the brothers watching.

Next day Philip said to his father, in a tone of great uneasiness: "Suppose some one should steal the black box?"

Old John Tarleton investigated. The box was gone!

A month after the funeral Luke bought another Jersey cow. Three months later forty chickens and an incubator.

Whereupon Philip's wife, Marty, and the grocer's wife, held a lengthy conference.

"The black box might explain his prosperity," confided Marty shrewdly.

By the time five years had passed, eighty head of thoroughbred Jersey cattle gave creamy milk through mechanical milkers in Luke's stalls; a silo rose, a white flower tower, beside Luke's new red barn; eggs from a thousand traped chickens were crated daily to a famous hotel in a city three states east, and an electrically equipped farm-house graced the hilltop where the two-room shack that was Luke's home, had stood.

During this time Philip and his family had turned their backs upon him; only the newcomers in Woodstock accepted his prosperity and did not wink when he passed by.

Mid-July, with the sun at its hottest, old John had a stroke. He never regained consciousness.

For the first time in three years Luke stood beside his brother, his proud look twisted to one of sorrow. His wife remained at home. After two years of slights and humiliations, Lily refused ever to meet Philip or Marty again.

Philip's wife, spurred by curiosity, opened the top drawer of the old man's dresser. It was empty, save for one thing. Her eyes riveted themselves on a black object in its center.

"What is it?" demanded her husband. "Look!" she gasped, pointing with a trembling finger.

Luke stepped forward as Philip's hand lifted it out—a black walnut box with a little silver key.

"Open it!" ordered Luke, his voice rasping. A paper lay folded within. Philip read:

"Beloved children: "That there may be no such unseemly contest as disputed inheritance, I have written the ticket attached to each jewel, indicating to whom each gift belongs, all of which you will find verified in my will."

"I changed my mind about burying so great a treasure, and, as you have guessed, stole the black box myself."

Lovingly, Father. "Marty's eyes fell before Luke's. Philip's face flushed painfully. (Copyright, 1931, by D. J. Walsh.)

Polo Costumes Are Vying With Racing Frocks

By ALICE LANGELEIR

PARIS (INS)— Polo costumes are putting in an important bid for popularity in midsummer French fashions, vying with racing frocks in beauty as well as originality.

Black and dark blue combined with white touches were seen on many chic women at Bagatelle recently, but there were also some very pretty Polo gowns in prints and pastels.

Mrs. Robert Fenwick, of the American Colony, appeared in white georgette with small rings embroidered in red over the entire surface. The bodice had a tucked irregular yoke of plain white georgette and the skirt was pleated back and front. A short jacket of red crepe de chine accompanied it.

Mrs. Potter Palmer has been seen wearing a dark blue and white shantung in three pieces.

One of the new blue-white chiffons made one of the prettiest Polo frocks, patterned with tiny black and pale blue and green geometric figures, with dozens of narrow volants making a skirt which touches the ground. The waistline is accented by a little bias ruffle and the sleeves are short worn with long white gloves.

Belge magacne makes another smart Polo dress in one piece with insertions of tucks both on the blouse and skirt with three-quarter coat to match.

A black crepe de chine with a bold pattern of white flowers running diagonally across the front as well as the lining of the coat, has a narrow scarf collar tied to form a small bow at the waist in front.

way to differ from your neighbor, much to her discomfort! And finally, it's lots of fun to do. (Copyright 1931)

But the decorative value isn't the only result of hand work. Crocheting to be exact, as a method of letting down last year's frocks that were perfectly all right except for length? By using a crocheted yoke, or an unusual crocheted girdle, knowingly incured, you can add inches and inches of length to your frocks. Have you ever thought how really simple it is to crochet, or embroider, the latest monograms that flaunt so unexpectedly on our clothes? And do you know how the gold and silver mesh buttons that are captivating Paris are made—in the little strass ones, and the pearl ones?

It's because of the magical, transforming influence of hand work that lovely ladies today are able to buy clothes that are much less expensive than ones they formerly bought, and "fix them up" into expensive any exclusive looking clothes. It is the supremely elegant

The National Museum

The size of the National Museum at Washington, D. C., is to be doubled at an expense of $6,500,000—and it will be money well spent. In many ways, it is unfortunate that the growth of the country has left the national capital in an out-of-the-way corner, as far as most of the states are concerned.

During the past few years there has been much criticism of the way history is taught in our schools and much of the complaint has a substantial foundation. Individual historians have been too apt to color our national history for school-room consumption, thereby installing erroneous ideas in the minds of the young.

No child can grow up to be a thoroughly good American without a working knowledge of the birth and growth of our government and the men who made lasting contributions to our institutions. United States history, as taught during the past two decades, or more, pictures national heroes so perfect as to discourage the average child.

No human could possibly attain the perfection of a Washington, a Jefferson or a Lincoln, as portrayed in the school room. Washington, for example, is idealized not only as a man but even in the pictures of him shown to our children. He would be none the less a hero, and a far more valuable asset as an example to emulate, were he pictured as he was, a fine, up-standing, but thoroughly human individual,—and not particularly handsome.

It is to be deeply regretted that every school child cannot visit the National Museum at Washington. Thousands of children and their teachers, of course, do visit the museum each year, but the number is infinitesimal, compared to the total number in the country.

To stand before a case of Washington relics and see that the Father of His Country was actually human, dramatizes for one, as nothing else can, the dark page of American history which preceded complete independence. To see the very tent, the very tent-stakes, the very camp equipment, knives, forks and spoons, which Washington used at Valley Forge, brings home to a child the fact that our heroes are not characters in a book but were real, living and breathing human beings.

The National Museum is a huge building and packed tight with exhibits of the greatest importance, ranging from historical-relics to Lindy's Spirit of St. Louis. Weeks could be spent to advantage in studying the things to be found there.

Like many other things, however, the usefulness of the museum is limited by the space accorded it and the funds with which to operate it. The museum is more than a national shrine, it is a workshop for scholars, and its facilities are utterly inadequate. Congress, recognizing these facts, has appropriated six and one-half millions to be used in doubling the size.

Even though Washington is inaccessible to many, in fact most, of the inhabitants of the country, the work should go on. With transportation facilities increasing in efficiency yearly, the time may come when every boy and girl in the country can be assured a visit to this marvelous house of wonders.

AN EGG THAT WOULDN'T BEHAVE

If you had an egg and it wouldn't behave
Just what would you do with that egg?
To make an egg do what it don't want to do
Strikes me like a difficult sort of a task.

All of which is pure nonsense. Of course, who ever heard of an egg either behaving or misbehaving? Nobody. That is nobody that I know unless it be Blackie the Crow. It is best not to mention eggs in Blackie's presence these days. They are a forbidden topic when he is about. Blackie is apt to be a little resentful at the mere mention of an egg. I don't know as I wholly blame him. He would feel if you knew all there was to know about eggs and then found out that you didn't at all. Well, that is the way it is with Blackie the Crow.

At one time I had told Blackie that he didn't know all there is to know about eggs and he would have laughed at the idea. Wasn't he, Blackie, hatched from an egg himself? And he was never so good as to look at it. He would have said, "I don't know about eggs? If he didn't know about eggs who did? That is the way he would have talked before he was hatched. He must take his choice and go away while the going was good. Which should he take?"

It often happens in this life that things which seem to be unimportant at the moment, in the long run, prove to be just the opposite. Now, so far as Blackie could see, it didn't make the least difference which egg he took excepting that one was a little bigger than the other. In fact, Blackie thought it the better of the two to look at for it was very smooth and shiny. So, partly on this account, and partly because it was the bigger, Blackie chose the white egg. He seized it in his claws and started to fly with it, but somehow he could not seem to get a good grip on it. He fluttered to the ground just outside the door and there he got a better grip. Just as Old Dandycock the Rooster, with head down and all the feathers on his neck standing out with anger, came charging at him. Blackie ran into the air and started over the Old Orchard toward the Green Forest.

Never had Blackie felt more like cavorting than he did at that time. He felt that he had been very smart, and I suspect that he also felt that he had been very brave. He would have liked to boast a little, but he didn't. He wisely held his tongue. It would be time enough to show his boasting after he had reached a place of safety and had eaten that egg. He was half way across the Old Orchard when he felt that egg beginning to slip. Now, at best it isn't easy to carry an egg without breaking it. You know how careful you have to be. Just imagine how Blackie felt when he felt the egg begin to slip. Do what he would couldn't get a better grip on it. It slipped a wee bit more. Blackie started down toward the ground. But he wasn't quick enough. He slipped, and down he went. He landed on the old stone wall, saw something white drop from Blackie's claws. He saw Blackie dash after it and clutch it in his beak. Then the white thing struck a branch of an old apple tree, bounced off and fell to the ground. Blackie followed it.

Striped Chipmunk stole very softly through the grass to see what Blackie the Crow was doing. Blackie was standing close beside the white thing that looked very much like an egg. He was looking at it with the queerest expression ever was. Now and then he would reach out and rap it sharply with his bill and then look as if he didn't know what to make of it. He didn't. That egg wasn't behaving right. It should have broken when it hit the ground. Blackie followed it.

Did you ever know any one who didn't claim that he was getting the worst of it?

People's Pulpit

Reading the Midwest Free Press for July 20th I noticed C. Walton's letter—he believes in the private ownership of everything as we now have it. He says that Mr. Walton—because capitalism and private ownership walks hand in hand—where you have private ownership, you also have capitalism and the same where you have capitalism you have private ownership—where is it going to get you? You, no doubt, are a big land owner or a business man and that may be your reason for upholding the private ownership. But if you were a working man or a poor farmer I hardly think you would uphold any such ideas—unless, of course, you weren't acquainted with anything else. Col- lective ownership such as commun- ism teaches will be in force in the U. S. some day and do not forget that it is coming, every indication points towards it—see what is happening in Germany at the pre- sent time—every capitalist nation getting together to save the Ger- man capitalist from being overthrown by the poor class, or commun- ism. Every big capitalist shivers at the mention of one word "red." He knows that word means the work- ing man.

For people are being made slaves every day in every country, U. S. included—the poor class is kept in check by the militia, religion and the schools where they teach "patri- otism" and to uphold a system which starves and makes slaves of the poor class. Under commun- ism, there is no poor class nor rich class. Under communism the people are being educated—in this country the children are only trained not edu- cated, notice the difference?

Let us have more discussion on this folks, write in again, I am sure that our readers of the Midwest Free Press, will print every letter—no matter how radical they may sound. Sincerely yours,

"SUFFICIENT UNTO ITSELF"

Situated in a proper environ- ment, "the human body contains within itself every substance neces- sary for the cure of disease." This environment must consist of sunshine, fresh air, and nothing but food to eat. Sunshine and fresh air are free and maybe that is why we do not appreciate them enough.

Surround the body with plenty of sunshine, breathe deeply enough to expand the lungs so that a large surface is presented for the venous blood to flow over, in order that the impurities may be removed, and oxygen taken in, and you then have the system in a position to use the food which is eaten "to keep the body safe."

To feed good to feel up and coming, the body must be vitally alive, not just existing, with barely enough energy to keep us from fall- ing down. When the body is filled with energy it has the needed sub- stances, in sufficient quantities, to keep itself in repair. This repair work is constantly going on, day and night.

Food means something besides eating everything we want just be- cause it suits one's palate. Many things have been prepared which taste mighty nice, but which have very little, if any, real value so far as supplying the body with the necessary substances is concerned.

To enable the body to combat ill- health, proper nutrition is of vital importance. A better idea of pro- per nutrition must be spread among the people so they can help them- selves, and to prevent ill-health.

There are "nerve foods" which should have broken when he struck at it with his bill.

However was he to eat that egg if he couldn't break the shell? Blackie didn't know. Finally he gave up trying, once more clutched the egg and flew off with it.

Aircraft Building

When the mighty motors of an airplane are heard overhead, few people realize the extreme amount of experimen- tation and regulation which have gone into the making of the plane itself. Perhaps no industry has ever had the close co- operation of manufacturers and government that the aircraft industry enjoys.

It was early recognized by the government that airplanes could not be built on the haphazard plan that most machin- ery is manufactured and most businesses operated. It was evi- dent that strict standards would have to be imposed in order that the purchaser of an airplane, or the passenger who uses it, could depend upon the airworthiness of the craft.

When aviation was put under the wing of the department of commerce, the manufacturers welcomed the move. Uniform rules for use of the airways and uniform standards of con- struction became almost immediately effective.

There is to be a conference next week of domestic manu- facturers. This is an annual event and the department of commerce officials, together with the manufacturers, plan any changes found necessary in standard requirements by the experience of the past. It is understood that few changes are to be made this year and those in prospect are of com- paratively slight importance.

It may be news to many to know that every airplane acci- dent is thoroughly investigated by the department in order to ascertain whether a lesson may be learned from the unfor- tunate occurrence. Much of the progress in aviation can be attributed to the searching investigations which have follow- ed airplane accidents.

Safety in the air becomes more and more assured each year

Uniform Laws

The movement looking toward uniform laws on various subjects continues to gain momentum. It is an absurdity that the fundamental laws of the states should differ so widely. Many years have been spent in an endeavor to obtain uniform legislation and considerable progress has already resulted. An instance of this is the passage of uniform laws governing bills and notes.

The latest effort is the enactment of uniform traffic regulations. There is nothing more annoying to automobilists than to find they have no idea of what traffic laws govern states and cities through which they are passing. In some states, Iowa for example, the right to speed is not limited to any given number of miles per hour. In many states 35-mile speed limits still prevail.

Divorce laws are probably the most important absurdity of our national codes. In Nevada, for example, a few weeks residence entitles a blushing bride to become a happy grass widow, while in Iowa a legal residence of a year is necessary before the bonds of matrimony may be cut by the courts.

It is difficult to see why all important state laws should not be uniform. After all, American citizens are pretty much alike whether they live in Maine or New Mexico.

Our Platform for the People Is:

1. Low taxation.
2. Fewer State Commissions.
3. Universal school books.
4. Lower freight rates.
5. Return of river transportation.
6. A cleanup of some state institutions.
7. More efficiency in public offices.

The Power of Mind Over Body

By NORMAN BAKER

(Courtesy TNT Magazine)
(Ed. Note: What follows is an installment of an article by Norman Baker which began in the June 24 issue of this paper. An installment will be published each day.)

I had a wonderful opportunity the past week to see the magic workings of suggestion. I was in the Baker Institute, an institution filled with patients receiving treatment which seems to be working miracles. A lady and her husband came in the business office. She was examined and the physicians pronounced her case malignant ulcers of the stomach. The lady had heard the same thing from her local physicians who suggested that she have an operation. She knew that operations did not cure ulcers of the stomach, and had heard all her life that they eventu- ally develop into cancer. She was filled with fear. The doctors at the institute tried to assure her that the treatment they offered would cure her. This was hard to believe. She was convinced that nothing would do but an operation and after that she could expect only temporary relief, and would soon suffer a recurrence of the trouble.

It happened that in the insti- tute was a lady with practically the same affliction. She was intro- duced to this lady, and the first words the patient said were "I just feel fine. How glad I am that I did not resort to an operation!" The eyes of the other brightened. The truthfulness of the statement had hit her with the force of a suggestion. Instead of taking the operation which she had decided upon she took the institute's treat- ment. Her immediate confidence in the patient caused the words of the latter to become an sugges- tion. "There is so much in the power of mind that it taxes one's mentality to fully realize it."

A method sometimes used to pro- duce sleep is to take long breaths while drawing in each breath with eyes closed, the eyeballs slightly rolled upward, not enough to cause any undue eye strain, give yourself suggestions of the drowsy sleep feeling. Think of being sleepy and drowsy while drawing in extra long breaths, then when ex- pelling the breath suggest to your- self that you are relieved, relaxed, and give yourself suggestions of feeling fine, feeling restful, feeling comfortable, of feeling so relaxed that you are going soundly to sleep. I have noticed that when expelling a long breath there is a slight pause before the next breath is drawn inward. During that period of practical inactivity it is an excellent moment to suggest be- ing tired and sleepy.

During these sleep tests, it does no harm to intermingle thoughts of things that you wish to accom- plish. For instance, if nervous, you may suggest something similar to the following: "I am tired to- night; I am going soundly, soundly asleep. I will sleep so soundly; I am so restful that when I awaken in the morning my nerves will be strong. Every day these will get stronger and stronger. I'm going soundly, s-o-u-n-d-l-y, a-s-l-e-e-p, so sleepy and tired, I'm going fast asleep." Be sure to permit no mental effort while doing these things. Just feel tired and go to sleep.

THE MESSAGE-SUGGESTION METHOD

Almost every day I have an ex- perience that proves the value of suggestion. During the past two weeks a girl of 17 was brought to a certain institute for treatment. Her moth- er previously had taken her to the Iowa State Medical Hospital where many X-rays were taken of her brain, and the physicians had de- clared that she was suffering from a degenerated brain spot on the left side of the brain.

The history of the girl's case was as follows: She was very active, nervous and anemic. She had same affliction. She was intro- duced to this lady, and the first words the patient said were "I just feel fine. How glad I am that I did not resort to an operation!" The eyes of the other brightened. The truthfulness of the statement had hit her with the force of a suggestion. Instead of taking the operation which she had decided upon she took the institute's treat- ment. Her immediate confidence in the patient caused the words of the latter to become an sugges- tion. "There is so much in the power of mind that it taxes one's mentality to fully realize it."

The nurse in charge permitted me to see the patient. Her condi- tion was pitiful indeed. The lit- tle girl lay there on the bed, sur- rounded with convulsions. She had just quieted down from a hysterical condition. In such cases about the first thing the average attendant will do is to administer a sleeping powder. Realizing that such drugs are detrimental to the nervous sys- tem and that the girl's trouble was to a considerable extent a nervous condition, I suggested a massage of the spine.

Sharkey-Walker Bout Merely Makes Fight Muddle Worse

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
NEW YORK.—(INS)—Instead of producing beyond all doubt the real contender for Max Baer's crown, the Sharkey-Walker "draw" has turned the heavyweight situation topsy turvy.

Today nobody can say with convincing positiveness who really deserves first crack at the German champion. The field has been thrown wide open; it has become sort of a heavyweight hurdy hurdy. We can now look forward to a fight featuring Mickey Walker, Primo Carnera, Tommy Loughran and (who knows) maybe Lawrence Stribling.

Don't laugh. Believe it or not old John Public is in for a series of those eliminations that never seem to eliminate.

Sharkey Sidelined
Had Sharkey knocked Walker out, as he should have done if he is the man he claims to be, everybody would have conceded that the garulous old deserves the first shot at the title. But Sharkey's discreditable showing has sidetracked him. Everybody knows Schmeling was none too eager to meet Sharkey after the pasting Jack gave him when they met a year ago in New York. Schmeling now has plenty of excuse for ducking Sharkey.

Walker, of course, is the new face in the heavyweight picture, and at this writing he perhaps has the best claim for a match with Schmeling. However, now that Mickey is up in the blue chips he will find others contesting his right to claim the title. The best challenger, Loughran, no doubt would like to take him on. And why shouldn't Carnera demand that Walker beat him first before he essays a try at the title?

Imagine the pygmy Walker in there against the giant Carnera! Could the courageous celt spot Carnera fifty or sixty pounds and beat him; you can answer that one. Carnera's pilot, are said to have virtually agreed on the terms for a 15-round bout.

Schmeling's Eye Injured
Carnera originally was under contract to meet Schmeling in September. But the German, upon reaching his native land after his victory over "Young" Stribling in Cleveland early this month, announced he would not be able to go through with the Carnera bout because of an eye injury he had received while fighting Stribling.

Tommy Loughran wants to box Sharkey in August. He thinks he can redeem the knockout Sharkey hung on him about two years ago. A Loughran-promoter Jimmy Johnston in Brooklyn next month.

All these matches complicate rather than clarify the heavyweight situation. By the time the Sharkeys, the Carneras and the Loughrans get through eliminating each other, "Young" Stribling will begin to think it's about time for him to stage a "comeback." And who can surely be in a class with any of them with the exception of Schmeling.

Jack Dempsey Buys Interest in Race Track Near Frisco

RENO, Nev.—(INS)—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion and now Reno fight promoter, has taken on another venture he had announced today. Dempsey has purchased an interest in the proposed race track which William P. Kyne, racing promoter, declared he intended to build near San Francisco in Contra Costa county.

Dempsey stated that he would aid in managing the track and that this new interest would in no way interfere with his Reno activities.

HAWKEYE WINS CLOSE CONTEST AT JEFFERSON

McKee Team Beaten In Factory League Game, 2-1

McKee and Hawkeye kiltball players staged a great battle in their Factory league game at the Jefferson field Thursday evening, the outcome not being decided until the last half of the seventh inning when the Hawkeye team punched a double and single with an error with none out to score the needed run to nose out the McKee team, 2 to 1.

In the National league game on the new diamond at Weed park, the Orange Squeeze aggregation snapped out of its three game hitting slump and pounded out 12 safe blows to win an easy game with the Prima Special outfit, 10 to 2. The Bankers won from the Baptists in their American league tilt on the old diamond at Weed park, 6 to 2.

Score in Fourth
Neither team scored in the first three innings at the Jefferson field, but in the fourth each scored a run. McKee's coming through a triple by C. Fabrizius and an infield out while Hawkeye scored its run on two errors and a double. Each side scored again in the fifth and got one man on in the sixth.

In the seventh Reed, McKee catcher, hit a double and advanced to third when Axel muffed G. Tobias' sidearm. However, some tight pitching by Powell set the side down without a run. The Hawkeye team then came through in the seventh with the winning run.

Squeezers Hit Hard
The Squeezers hit the ball hard in the first inning, getting two doubles, a triple, a home run and two singles to score five runs. Barker hit the home run, Mahair the triple and Swisher and Huber each got doubles.

The winners did not make an error in the five innings of play. Reed collected eight hits off the hurling of Nester but could not make them count. Box scores of Prima-Orange squeeze and Hawkeye-McKee games:

CINCINNATI.—(INS)—Bat Battalino, of Hartford, Conn., world's featherweight champion, today had again proved his right to the crown. He successfully defended his title here last night against Freddie Miller, Cincinnati champion, and gave a worthy exhibition. Miller was lucky to escape a kayo.

Battalino knocked Miller down twice in the eighth round for counts of nine. The bell finally saved the challenger and he managed to go the distance. The champion won practically every round.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS

by John Hix

The term "horse-power" originated from the results of experiments carried out by James Watt, over a century ago, with strong dry horses. The experiments were conducted to find out the rate at which a horse does its work under average conditions. The Encyclopedia Americana says: "As a horse can exert its full force only for about six hours a day, one horsepower of machinery is equal to that of 4.4 horses."

MCKEE DEFEATS JOHNNY LASCHE

Three Des Moines and One Cedar Rapids Golfers Survive

MASON CITY COUNTRY CLUB, Mason City, Ia.—(INS)—Three Des Moines golfers and one Cedar Rapids player today won the right to enter the finals of the 1931 Iowa Amateur Golf tournament.

The thirty-six hole final matches today will be between Pete Jordan of Des Moines who meets John Vavra of Cedar Rapids and Bob McKee of Des Moines who meets Gilbert Phillips of Des Moines.

All won the right to play in the semi-finals by winning in the quarter-finals yesterday. Two of the matches were bitter fights, the other two were sound trimmings.

McKee Wins One Up
McKee eliminated John Lasche, seventeen year old Waterloo boy, one up in the best match yesterday. Phillips staged a late rally to nose out John Kraft of Cedar Rapids, two up.

Jordan, medalist this year, had an easy time eliminating Blaine Asher of Spencer, 9 and 8, while Vavra shot consistently to put out Allen Hvistendahl of Sioux City, 7 and 5.

The McKee-Lasche match was a nip-and-tuck affair with the younger Waterloo player losing only after a bitter struggle. It marked the end of this tournament for the darkhorse Lasche who for two years now has been pulling up to state to advance to the state tourney.

When McKee, a former state champion, sank a par five on the thirty sixth hole late yesterday afternoon while Johnny was missing his putt for a five it ended a match that was in doubt all the way.

At the end of nine holes, McKee was two up. At the end of eighteen he was one up. At the end of twenty-seven Lasche was three up. They had the twenty-eighth hole squared the match again.

The thirty-fifth was halved and then McKee won the last hole and the match.

DRIVERS TO BE GIVEN PERMITS

Owners of Cars Will Not Be Required To Pay Fee

Applicants for drivers' licenses under the new law which requires that anyone driving a motor vehicle in Iowa be licensed by Jan. 1, 1932, will not be compelled to take tests to obtain a license, W. A. Stevens, superintendent of the state motor vehicle department announced.

Final preparations for carrying out the new regulations are under way and everything will be in readiness for the issuing of new licenses in all parts of the state commencing September 1.

Authority to examine applicants and issue licenses under the new plan will be issued to sheriffs and chiefs of police in all first class cities, and it is probable that the authority will be extended to individuals under these officials in order that applicants can be examined in other cities and towns on special dates.

Can Revoke Licenses
The drivers' license law is introduced as a bill in the legislature by Senator H. Doran of Boone. It is similar to the measure adopted two years ago which made it possible for the courts to revoke automobile license where judgments rendered in connection with automobile accidents were not paid in 60 days.

Under the new law, the person in whose name the car is registered, will be given an operator's license free, proving he or she is of proper age. Other drivers will be required to pay 25 cents, provided the car is of the pleasure type. A fee of $2 will be required annually of chauffeurs.

The operators license will be good for two years, expiring on December 31, unless they are suspended or revoked by the department for any reason specified by the law. Each agency issuing the operator's license is allowed to retain 15 cents, and the amount to be retained for a chauffeur's license is 50 cents.

Fees Are Retained
Such fees will go to the county, city or town general fund. Under the new law, anyone over 15 may apply for a license, but those under 18 must have the signature of a parent or guardian. A license may be obtained by children between 14 and 15, but only for going to and from school.

Drivers of school buses who obtain licenses must be 16 or over and no one under 31 will be given a permit to drive a bus carrying passengers who pay fare. Offenses which make suspension or revocation of license mandatory under the law, are as follows: manslaughter, resulting from operation of a car; driving under influence of liquor or drugs; perjury or making false affidavit to obtain license; any offense involving the car and punishable as a felony; conviction of bail forfeit on three charges of reckless driving in a 12-month period; failure to stop after an accident.

List Ineligibles
Habitual drunkards, those addicted to the use of drugs and those who are mentally or physically unfit, where operation of a car would endanger the lives of others, are not eligible for a license. Tourists, where from a state having a license law or not, will be permitted to operate their car in Iowa for a period of 30 days without obtaining a license. A license will be necessary should they remain any longer.

Where licenses are revoked, the licensee cannot apply for a license before expiration of a year, but suspensions may be suspended for various infractions of the traffic laws in any city or state. The person whose license is suspended, may be given a hearing in his home, county, or may appeal to the equity division of the district court from a decision given by the department.

COUNTY GETS BRIDGE

Thurst, celebrated its closer alliance with the outside world with the dedication of the only river bridge it possesses.

ASKS 90 DAYS IN JAIL—GETS ONLY 60
Dissatisfied when Judge E. B. Parsons sentenced him to 30 days in jail for sleeping in his wife, James Verano, of Holland, Mich., asked for a 90-day term instead. The judge compromised and gave him 60 days.

TRY TO 'FOOL' THE OTTERS

SYNOPSIS

BETH SHANNON, a pretty young stenographer, sole support of her widowed, invalid mother, is in love with her employer, PHILIP DANE. She is also in possession of a trunkful of beautiful clothes sent her from Paris by a deceased aunt and a letter marked, "To be opened a year from today." She has refused to marry a family friend, GEORGE METCAL, who is jealous of her friends at the office. Among the best of them is ARNOLD STONE, a man older than Beth, who has been very kind to her and who has interested her in becoming a member of a little theater group and to take part in a play Arnold has taken her to dinner at a small French restaurant and tells her there is something she must know about him if they are to be good friends.

CHAPTER XII

A Secret Agreement
BETH put down her spoon and smiled across the table at him. "Before you tell me anything," she said, "I want you to know that I like you just the same, no matter what it is."

Arnold caught his breath. "What a splendid thing to say!" he cried. "That's positively one of the nicest things that ever happened to me. Beth, I won't forget it. And it makes it easier for me to go on. I rather think from the look in your eyes that you've guessed it—I'm married, Beth. Now you know."

The lights danced dizzily before Beth's eyes. This meant the end of their friendship, of course. She wasn't the least bit in love with him, but she did like him and she would miss his companionship sadly. He was speaking again. He was speaking to her, in continuing to be his friend.

"Gay?"
He was tracing little patterns on the tablecloth. "I think I'd like to tell you about it, if you don't mind listening. Beth, I don't talk about it much, but I don't want you to think for an instant that I feel sorry for myself or anything like that. But once in a while I like to tell it all over again to some one who will understand."

"I'd like to hear about it, if—if it doesn't hurt you too much," Beth said softly.
"It never stops hurting," he said with a twisted smile that wrung Beth's heart, "but it won't hurt any worse for my telling about it. My wife is one of the loveliest women you could ever see. Beth. She was a beautiful girl. I knew her family, and I am several years older. Until we were married I never did anything. I had some money from my father and I liked books and music and the theater, but soon after we were married I realized I'd have to add to my income, for Gay liked pretty clothes and good times and things like that to an extent that I couldn't pay for very well. She's like her name, Beth. Light-hearted and jolly and full of fun."

"We Were Different"
"Well, I went to work and tried to keep up with Gay, but wasn't strong enough to work all day and dance at night and I—oh, it's the old story. I let her go out with other men, it's done all the time in my particular circle in New York, and I wasn't long before she found some one—well, more entertaining than I was."

He paused and Beth, longing to say something to comfort him, could think of no appropriate words, could only share his moment's silence.
"I can't blame her," he went on presently. "I knew that we were different when we were married. But I was so terribly in love with her—I think she was with me, too—that I had an idea our love could make up for all the other things we didn't have in common. After she began to care for this other man she suffered too. You see, she liked me, she still likes me, and she hated to hurt me. So, because she's frank and honest, Beth, we talked it all over."

"I had an idea that if we had a child things would be better. And she was so anxious to try to patch things up—there was nothing cheap or underhand about any of this, you understand—that she agreed, and we had a child. It died, Beth, when it was born, and Gay nearly died too. When she was well again—it took a long time—we went abroad, and I made her buy clothes and do all the things she liked best. But I couldn't stand that hurt look in her eyes. She tried desperately to forget this other man, and he was awfully decent about the whole affair."

Once again he stopped, looking back into the past, striving, it seemed to Beth, to discover the reason for his unhappiness.
"Finally we came home. I couldn't give her up. I plugged into work and she plunged into one extravagance after another and things went from bad to worse. At last I found I owed more money than I could pay. She had unlimited credit in the stores here and we had it out again. By that time it seemed to me that we were doing something horrible. We were killing with our own hands everything fine and clean that had come into our lives. I knew she was seeing this man that her wild spending was just another way of trying to fill in the terrible blank spaces in her life and so—

"You divorced her," Beth supplied.
"She divorced me," Beth supplied.
"In New York?"

"Yes," a spasm of pain crossed his face. "One of those deadly, cold, arranged affairs that are managed for you, Beth. I couldn't go away, I had to work to try to catch up with the bills I owed. The man she was in love with was here—the quickest, simplest way was to go through the courts here and settle the thing at once."

"Yes—a year ago. I think—I hope, they're very happy. I see her once in a while at the theater or a party or something. She looks happy—and yet I always think of her as my wife. I can't help it."

"You still love her?" Beth asked unbelievably. Between the lines of his story she could read, she thought, something of the character of this woman, this Gay, who spent money riotously and fell in love with another man while she was still married.

"Yes, I still love her," Beth studied his face, with its fine cut lines, its sad eyes.
"You find that hard to believe?" he asked, after the silence had become prolonged.

"Yes, I do," said Beth honestly. "There are some people like that," he observed, speaking in a more natural tone of voice, "men and women both. They love just once in their lives, and if that love doesn't hold true for them, they never love again. I think, in turn he studied Beth's face heart-shaped with wistful violet eyes, firm mouth, pointed chin, "I think you're one of them yourself, Beth."

"Am I?" she raised her head and looked at him. "It isn't a very happy way to be, is it?"
"That depends. If you love some one who returns your love, who is loyal through everything, it's the happiest way in the world to be."

Beth shivered. "But when you don't," she asked.
"Then you have to find other things to make up for it. It doesn't do for one-love people to try experimenting. They have to be faithful to one person only, or else they take to strong drink, or fritter away their lives in a dozen little sins, and come out empty-handed at the last."

"Get Ready—"
"Suppose—suppose," Beth asked, "you are like that, and you love some one who never responds to your love at all. Then what?"
"You have to keep on being true."

—not just to that person, but to yourself, Beth. That's the kind of fidelity to ideals that counts—being true to yourself."

"Then you think it's better to love some one who never returns your love than not to love at all?"
"I'm sure of it," he said confidently. "Your life is bound to be richer and fuller and more understanding for your very suffering."

"What makes you think I'm one of the people who loves once?" Beth challenged him.

He looked at her a long time before he answered. "I don't think you're ready to talk about that with me, are you, Beth?"
Beth saw that he knew. She shook her head. "No, I'm not," she confessed.

"But this much I will say," he reached across the table and took her hand. "Get ready for it, if it does come to you. Read and think and improve yourself, fit yourself for the very station you dream of occupying, however impossible it seems to attain. Then, even if you fail, you've grown richer, gained things that nothing can take from you, that will sustain you in your hour of loss. That's worth while, isn't it, Beth?"

Beth felt a lump in her throat. "Yes, it is," she said softly. And it seemed to her that now some secret agreement had been entered into between them. He knew of her love for Philip Dane, knew without being told. And he was bidding her to make herself worthy. Yes, that was worth while. Beth smiled at him, and in her smile he read the message she meant for him—she would try, and if she failed, she would have him always for a friend.

MINERS BOMBED IN THEIR BUNKS

PITTSBURGH — (INS) — Snipers bullets and the roar of exploding bombs were heard in bituminous coal fields Thursday.

A one-story garage, recently converted into a rooming house near the Wildwood mine of the Butler Consolidated Coal company, was ripped apart by a bomb. Six miners were hurled from their bunks. One man was cut and bruised while the others escaped with slight injuries.

Less than a half hour later, three men opened fire from ambush on a small cottage in the Wildwood district in which three non-union miners have been living.

Six rifle volleys were fired from ambush. The bullets whistled around the cottage but no one was hurt.

John Priestis, one of the miners, yawned when questioned. He said: "Sure, I heard them shoot. I got up. Close the door. Go back to bed."

Six were hurt. One man was reported seriously injured. First reports said he had been rushed to a hospital. The other five were injured by falling debris when the garage walls crumpled inward like papier mache.

Interior of the structure was a shambles immediately after the blast let go.

Sheriff's deputies from Pittsburgh left at once for the scene.

One man was killed and many injured near the Wildwood mine a month ago when Deputy sheriffs opened fire on rioting strikers.

CHRISTIANITY SPREAD BY PERSECUTION
LESSON TEXT—Acts 7:54-8:4;
11:19-21; 1 Pet. 4:12-19.
GOLDEN TEXT—Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried: and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Gospel Spread by Persecution.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Christianity Spread by Persecution.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Martyrs of the Early Church.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Results of Persecution.

Christianity is a life. a "way." Because it is the life of God expressing himself in the human form, it is destructible. It's genius is to prosper through opposition. "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church." Prosperity may ruin the church. Prosperity may ruin the witness of the pastor and the people.

I. Stephen Stoned (Acts 7:54-60).

In Stephen's ministry as deacon he testified of Jesus Christ and wrought miracles in conformation with the Word of God. This aroused violent opposition on the part of the synagogue officials. Not being able to meet the wisdom as Stephen spoke by the Holy Spirit, they stirred up the people against him. They arrested him and brought him before the council. They accused him of blasphemy and employed false witnesses against him. They could not silence him by argument before the council so they decided to do so by violence.

1. Stephen looking into heaven (vv. 55). Instead of looking about upon his murderers in their raging fury he looked up to heaven. This was the secret of his calmness.

2. He saw the glory of God (v. 55). A vision of God's glory can be seen by those who are loyal to him even unto death.

3. He saw Jesus at the right hand of God (vv. 55, 56). The fact that Jesus was standing showed his actual interest in the sufferings of his faithful witness.

4. Cast out of the city and stoned (vv. 58, 59).

5. His prayer (v. 60). He kneeled down and cried with a loud voice, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." How like the prayer of Jesus on the cross!

6. He fell asleep (v. 60). The Christian's death in only a sleep.

II. Persecution of the Church at Jerusalem (Acts 8:1-4).

1. The ringleader (vv. 1, 3). As a member of the Sanhedrin Saul had cast his vote against Stephen. He perhaps was the Sanhedrin representative in the execution of the execution. Saul's consenting to Stephen's death shows that he was not taking part himself, but directing the activities.

2. The disciples scattered (v. 1). The stoning of Stephen had aroused the passions of savage men that they proceeded to wreak vengeance upon the Christians, who, as a result, were scattered abroad.

3. Preaching the Word (v. 4). Though scattered throughout Jerusalem, they did not go out in a panic, but went "everywhere preaching."

III. Preaching the Lord Jesus at Antioch (Acts 11:19-21).

1. The presence of the new missionary center was now being prepared. With the conversion of Saul and his commission as the apostle to the Gentiles, a new center was needed. Antioch was well

THE LAST CALL

Is Now Only a Matter of a Few Hours

PRIZE OF
YOUR CHOICE
IN NEXT
3 DAYS

A few more circuits of the hour hand, and—too late! If Saturday and Monday pass without speedy action on your part, the responsibility will rest on yourself. Monday night at 10 o'clock is positively your last chance to enter subscriptions in the Midwest Free Press big campaign and secure "First Period" votes, the maximum number to be allowed. After this time, and throughout the remainder of the campaign, there is a material decrease in the voting power of subscriptions. Long term subscriptions count most and a few such orders now from unexpected sources might prove to be the deciding factors in this race. You can only lose by holding subscriptions back now; and after the time for action has passed, all regrets in the world will be of no avail. Let's go for a big first period finish!
